

I oppose loosening the rules designed to promote and protect diversity of media ownership. These rules were adopted to ensure that the public would receive a diverse range of viewpoints from the media, and not simply the opinions of a handful of media conglomerates. The cable ownership cap is a crucial element of our democratic media, and it should not be weakened.

Give me a break. What ever happened to the notion that the FCC was going to protect the consumer from monopolies and corporate behavior unbecoming of a corporation. Ever since the Bush administration took office the FCC has turned a blind eye to mega mergers that could potentially harmfully affect the economic sensibilities of the average american citizen consumer.

Please, if the FCC takes any action, let it be strengthening the rules and making mergers difficult if not impossible for companies to get away with.

We do not want a small group of individual CEO's making the decisions and choosing what information reaches the public. We want a free, diverse, democratic electronic media and we want it now goddammit.
